

Income tax withholdings

The withholdings on account of the personal income tax are advances to the Treasury, amounts of money advanced to the Tax Agency on account of the expected result in the income statement or Corporation Tax.

They are regulated by law, which establishes the percentages to apply in each case. They are compulsory and affect many types of income, among which are those of employees, professionals and rental of premises or offices.

With the 365 IRPF extension you can manage and calculate personal income tax on both sales and purchases.
